

Inclusion

Inclusion is about including others in something like a game even if they are different than you. Then there is exclusion and that means to not let someone play a game with you or not letting them join a game of lets say tag.

Some ways in our class we include people is by asking them if they want to play a game at recess, or in the gym, or during outdoor phys ed in games like manhunt, hunger games and hockey. We always make sure that when we make teams, the teams are fair. We also have a student with Autism and some of the ways we include him are that he joins us in the class in the same amounts of time and he has EA's that helps him when he's with us.

In my opinion inclusion is very important because you always want to include people in something you are doing because it will make the person feel very good and welcomed. School would not feel like a very nice place for that person and they would not want to come to school if they weren't valued and included, and that is not what school is about! It is about including other people even if they are different than you. ALWAYS INCLUDE OTHER PEOPLE!!!
